

1955-1956:
St. Lawrence Friary,
 Milton, Massachusetts
 Assistant novice master

1956-1961:
St. John the Baptist
 New York, New York
 Parish assistant

1961-1962:
Sacred Heart Friary,
 Yonkers, New York
 Parish assistant

1962:
St. Francis Chapel,
 Springfield, Massachusetts
 Chapel assistant

1962-1963:
Sacred Heart Friary,
 Yonkers, New York
 Assistant, HS teacher

1963:
Mary Immaculate Friary,
 Garrison, New York
 Sisters' chaplain

1963-1964:
St. Michael Friary,
 Brooklyn, New York
 Parish assistant

Declan Finn, O.F.M. Cap. 1918—1970

"When James Finn, assistant sacristan at St. Patrick Cathedral, decided to dedicate his life to God, he searched for a way of life that would demand a total giving. Total giving was not foreign to him, for as the oldest son of a widowed mother and brother to three sisters and a younger brother, concern and sacrifice were of necessity characteristic of his early years.

"After preparatory seminary training, his choice fell to the Capuchin Franciscans. He sought admission to the Order and was accepted. Those who knew James Finn realized that he would persevere; for once he set himself to something he was not the type to renege.

"In September 1947 when he entered the Capuchin novitiate of St. Felix in Huntington, Indiana, he followed the custom in those days and chose a new name. With his father's name Finn, and his mother's name Farrell, it came to no surprise that he would seek a patron from the Irish martyrology and chose the name Declan.

"St. Patrick Cathedral parish and his dear friend Bishop Flannelly were happy and proud to welcome this priest son of the parish home for his First Solemn Mass in June of 1954, the day after his ordination. Declan was not the type to boast, but he often enjoyed referring to his home parish.

"Among the many assignments after his ordination, Declan spend the longest part of his priestly career here at Sacred Heart as an assistant and teacher of religion in the High School. He loved Sacred Heart people and he loved the youngsters in his quiet reserved way.

"Few were the parochial or social events that he wasn't called on to entertain with his repertoire of Irish songs. Galway Bay was his specialty. Each time he sang it, it contained a love of remembrance of his parents. Each time he sang it, it was a happy protestation of his deep faith. The concluding words: If there's going to be a life here after" were always amended by Declan to sing: Since there is going to be...

"Father Declan's remains now lie in our little Capuchin cemetery among the remains of others he knew well and appreciated.

"The seasons will revolve. The rain, the snow, the mighty winds that characterize this hill will blow; the green and flowers of the hill will come and go. Before many decades of years are past, except with but a few he will be memory.

"But a memory that stands as a monument to all that says though we only pass through here once, here was one who as he passed, touched the hearts of many with human kindness with gentleness and God's grace." [Presenter unknown]

Declan, who had been working at Sacred Heart in Yonkers since 1964, died on 03 February 1970. On 15 January, he was hearing confessions of the Sisters who staff Rosary Hill Home in Hawthorne, New York, when he was stricken with a heart attack. He was taken to nearby Grasslands Hospital and remained in the intensive care unit until he was transferred to Saint John Hospital in Yonkers, New York on 01 February. He died unexpectedly two days later.

Above: Brendan Morrissey, Terence O'Toole and Declan Finn with two Friars of the Atonement-circa 1950-1951